

Human Exposure Research in a Cyclical Industry Part 2: Releases to Water from Unconventional Oil and Natural Gas Development

May 18, 2021

11:30 AM to 1:15 PM EDT

Welcome! The webinar will begin shortly.

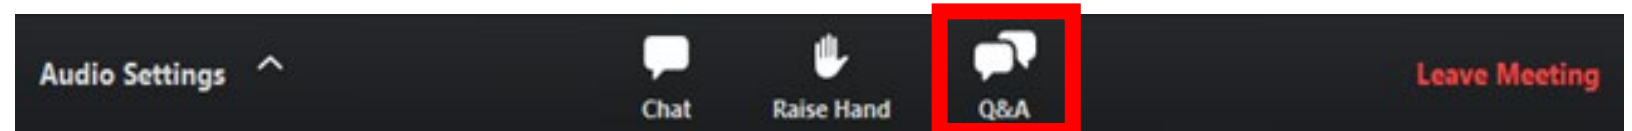

- This webinar is the second in a series entitled “Energy Production and Human Health: Surveying Current Knowledge about Exposures from Unconventional Oil and Natural Gas Development.”
- Please visit our website for updates about the future sessions and to learn more about HEI-Energy: <https://hei-energy.org/>

Purpose of Today's Webinar

- Increase understanding of specific UOGD processes that might result in releases to surface water or groundwater and trends in the releases.
- Summarize research efforts for identifying potential UOGD impacts on water quality
- Describe operational information needed for decision-makers to protect public health and to enhance utility of human exposure research:
 - Federal Perspective
 - State Perspective

Logistics

- All attendees are muted with no audio for the duration of the webinar.
- Submit questions via the Q&A function. You can also “upvote” questions from other participants that match your own question.
- We will have a brief Q&A period after each talk and a 25-minute panel discussion with Q&A at the end.

- This webinar will be recorded and posted on our website.
- If you experience any logistical difficulties, please email us at ladelsheim@healtheffects.org.
- Please complete the post-webinar survey. It will pop up on your screen as you exit the webinar. We appreciate your feedback. It will also be sent to you in a thank you email tomorrow.
